The location of the valve can vary depending on the type of building and when it was installed: The gas meter and gas service shutoff valve is usually located on the side or in front of the building. If the building has a breezeway, it could be located there. Gas Shutoff Valve In some cases, the gas meter can be located in a cabinet enclosure built into the building or located inside the building. In these cases, the gas service shutoff valve can be located outside on a section of gas service pipe next to the building, or near the gas meter. Cabinet.Meter Cabinet.Meter Outside If there are multiple meters serving gas to multiple units within a building, there are individual gas service shutoff valves for each unit near each of the gas meters, including a master valve for the entire building where the gas pipe comes out of the ground. Your facilities personnel or your property manager (if you are leasing) might be able to help you locate your unit's valve location. Multiple Meters If you still are not able to locate the gas service shutoff valve, contact PG&E for assistance to locate the valve. When to Turn Off Your Gas Do not shut off the gas unless you smell gas, hear gas escaping, see a broken gas line or if you suspect a gas leak. If you shut off the gas, there may be a considerable delay before PG&E can turn your service on. Once the gas is shut off at the meter, do not try to turn it back on yourself. If the gas service shutoff valve is closed, PG&E or another qualified professional should perform a safety inspection before the gas service is restored and the appliance pilots are lit. How to Turn Off Your Gas Gas Service Shutoff Valve In an emergency, your gas can be turned off at the main gas service shutoff valve normally located near your gas meter. Using a 12 to 15 inch adjustable pipe or crescent-type wrench or other suitable tool, give the valve a quarter turn; the valve is closed when the tang (the part you put the wrench on) is crosswise to the pipe. Know where your main gas service shutoff valve is locatedKeep an adjustable pipe or crescent-type wrench available to turn off the gas in case of an emergencyKnow how to shut off the gas at the gas service shutoff valveLeave it off until service can be restored safely by PG&E or another qualified professional If your gas service is configured differently from the one described and you wish to know how to turn off your gas, please contact PG&E. Appliance Gas Shutoff Valve Appliance Gas Shutoff Valve Most gas appliances have a gas shutoff valve located near the appliance that lets you turn off the gas to that appliance only. In some cases, turning off the gas at the appliance's shutoff valve will suffice if there is a gas leak or the appliance needs to be replaced or serviced. You should have an appliance gas shutoff valve installed at each gas appliance that lets you turn off the gas to that appliance only, instead of shutting off all gas at the main gas service shutoff valve. To turn off the gas at the gas appliance, rotate the valve a quarter turn. Important: When you turn off location on your phone, apps and services can't get your phone's location. You can still get local results and ads based on your IP address. Tip: Apps have their own settings. Learn how to manage app location settings. Turn location on or off for your phone Swipe down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold Location . If you don't find Location : Tap Edit or Settings . Drag Location into your Quick Settings. Tap Location Services Google Location Accuracy. Help your phone get a more accurate location (Google Location Services a.k.a. Google Location Accuracy) Turn your phone's location accuracy on or off Swipe down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold Location . If you don't find Location : Tap Edit or Settings . Drag Location into your Quick Settings. Tap Location Services Google Location Accuracy. Turn Improve Location Accuracy on or off. Swipe down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold Location . If you don't find Location : Tap Edit or Settings . Drag Location into your Quick Settings. Tap Advanced Google Location Accuracy. Turn Improve Location Accuracy on or off. When Google Location Accuracy is on When you have Google Location Accuracy turned on, your phone uses these sources to get the most accurate location: GPS Wi-Fi Mobile networks Sensors (such as accelerometer) Google may collect location data periodically and use this data in an anonymous way to improve location accuracy and location-based services. When Google Location Accuracy is off When you turn off Google Location Accuracy, your phone uses GPS and sensors, like accelerometer, to determine location. GPS can be slower and less accurate than other sources. When Google Location Accuracy is off, GPS, Wi-Fi, network, and sensor data are not used or collected by Google Location Accuracy. For Android 12 and higher, you can manage each app's permission to access precise location. This is different from Google Location Accuracy, which is a location setting for your device that allows your phone to use more sources for the most accurate location. Even with Google Location Accuracy on, you can grant an app only approximate location permission if you don't want to allow it access to your device's precise location. If you turn off Google Location Accuracy, apps may not be able to get your device's precise location. Learn how to manage app location permissions. Set up Wi-Fi & Bluetooth scanning To help apps get better location info, you can let your phone scan for nearby Wi-Fi access points or Bluetooth devices. Android 12 & higher Swipe down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold Location . If you don't find Location : Tap Edit or Settings . Drag Location into your Quick Settings. Tap Location services. Turn Wi-Fi scanning and Bluetooth scanning on or off. Android 11 & lower Swipe down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold Location . If you don't find Location : Tap Edit or Settings . Drag Location into your Quick Settings. Tap Wi-Fi scanning and Bluetooth scanning. Turn Wi-Fi scanning and Bluetooth scanning on or off. Send your location in an emergency To help first responders find you quickly, your phone's location can be sent when you dial or text an emergency number. For example, dialing 911 in the US or 112 in Europe. If Android Emergency Location Service (ELS) works in your country and on your mobile network, and you haven't turned off ELS, your phone will automatically send its location to first responders using ELS. If ELS is off, your mobile carrier may still send the device's location during an emergency call or text. Turn Android Emergency Location Service on or off You can turn Emergency Location Service on or off at any time. To open your device's Settings app, swipe down twice from the top of the screen. Tap Settings Safety & emergency. Turn Emergency Location Service on or off. Swipe down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold Location . If you don't find Location : Tap Edit or Settings . Drag Location into your Quick Settings. Tap Advanced Emergency Location Service. Turn Emergency Location Service on or off. Tip: Learn how to get help in an emergency. How Emergency Location Service works ELS is only activated when you call or text a local emergency number. During your emergency call, ELS may use Google Location Accuracy and other information to get the most accurate location possible for the device. Your phone sends its location to authorized emergency partners for the purpose of helping emergency services locate you. Your location is sent directly from your phone to emergency partners. After a completed emergency call or text during which ELS was active, your phone may send deidentified usage and analytics data to Google for the purpose of analyzing how well ELS works. This information doesn't include the location sent to authorized emergency partners, and doesn't identify you. If you use an older Android version Choose location settings (Android 9.0) To change location settings: Open your device's Settings app. Tap Security & Location Location. If you have a work profile, tap Advanced. Then, choose an option: Turn Location on or off: Tap Location. Scan for nearby networks: Tap Advanced Scanning. Turn Wi-Fi scanning or Bluetooth scanning on or off. Turn emergency location service on or off: Tap Advanced Google Emergency Location Service. Turn Emergency Location Service on or off. Choose location mode (Android 4.4—8.1) Open your phone's Settings app. Tap Security & Location Location. If you don't find "Security & Location," tap Location. Tap Mode. Select a mode: High accuracy: Use GPS, Wi-Fi, mobile networks, and sensors to get the most accurate location. Use Google Location Services to help estimate your phone's location faster and more accurately. Battery saving: Use sources that use less battery, like Wi-Fi and mobile networks. Use Google Location Services to help estimate your phone's location faster and more accurately. Device only: Use GPS and sensors. Don't use Google Location Services to improve location accuracy. This can estimate your phone's location more slowly and use more battery. Choose location access (Android 4.1—4.3) You can control what location information your phone can use. Open your phone's Settings app. Under "Personal," tap Location access. At the top of the screen, turn Access to my location on or off. When location access is on, pick either or both of: GPS satellites: Lets your phone estimate its location from satellite signals, like a GPS device in a car. Wi-Fi & mobile network location: Lets your phone use Google Location Services to help estimate its location faster, with or without GPS. When location access is off: Your phone can't find its precise location or share it with any apps. Tip: If you have a tablet that more than one person uses, each person can have different location access settings. SearchClear searchCloseGoogle appsMain menu
